MEMORANDUM ON THE OBJECTS OF THE PROPERTY VALUATION BILL, 2013

1. BACKGROUND

- 1.1 A central feature of the land reform programme has been the acquisition of land on the basis of the ‘willing buyer willing seller’ (i.e. demand—driven and market—based) model, predominantly based upon the historical value at the time of dispossession. Through this programme, Government has set the target of delivering 30% of commercial agricultural land, or about 25 million hectares, by 2015. To date, only a quarter of the 30% target has been reached.
- 1.2 A critical issue in land reform is that of escalating land prices. Escalating land prices have contributed significantly to the slow pace of land redistribution. This has in turn raised questions about the efficacy of the entire market-based land reform process and Government’s ability to participate therein without influencing the market and thus the land prices.
- 1.3 Questions are increasingly being asked whether market-assisted land reform, based on the principle of willing-buyer-willing-seller, can deliver at the required scale and whether there needs to be greater Government intervention, including more willingness to use expropriation. It has been argued that letting the market alone determine the pace of land reform delivery is not desirable.
- 1.4 One of the problems identified in government’s implementation of land reform programmes is the issue of valuations. By virtue of the willing-buyer-willing-seller principle, market value principles are applied when government acquires land for land reform purposes. Government is concerned that the principle of market value is not interpreted correctly and applied in a uniform manner. Further, it has become apparent that there is a need to properly analyse and aggressively implement the framework of how to deal with land valuations and the determination of the compensation which should be linked to section 25(3) of the Constitution of the Republic of South Africa, 1996, (“the Constitution”).
- 1.5 In order to deal with the challenges outlined above, new legislation is required to give effect to the provisions of the Constitution which provide for land reform and land restitution and to facilitate land reform and land restitution through the valuation of property. The Property Valuation Bill was developed with a view to meet these challenges.
- 1.6 The Bill provides for the establishment, functions and powers of the Office of the Valuer-General which will provide a compulsory valuation service in respect of property that has been identified for land reform, as well as a voluntary valuation service to departments for the acquisition or disposal of property. The Office of the Valuer-General will also provide a regulatory service which will entail the setting of criteria and procedures for valuations as well as the monitoring of valuations to ensure compliance.

- 5.1. The State Law Advisers and the Department of Rural Development and Land Reform are of the opinion that this Bill must be dealt with in accordance with the procedure established by section 75 of the Constitution, since it contains no provision to which the procedure set out in section 74 or section 76 of the Constitution applies.
